

BRYAN ROUSED IN BROOKLYN VOTERS.

From Now On the Campaign in Kings County Will Be Kept Red Hot.

Meetings Will Be Held Every Night in All the Wards of the City.

THREE STRONG FORCES AT WORK.

The Democratic Organization, the Bryan League of Labor Unions and the Federation of Bryan and Sewall Clubs Renew Their Activity.

The Democrats of Kings County are preparing to strike while the iron is hot. The triumphant Bryan meetings have had greater political effect than any campaign event in many years, and in order that the silver sentiment shall not abate, steps were taken yesterday to make it a hot canvass from now till election day. Three chief forces are at work in the fight for Bryan. First is the Democratic organization, loyal as soldiers in time of war, working in harmony with the organization is the Bryan League, composed of representatives from the hundred labor organizations supporting the Chicago nominees, and the Federation of Bryan and Sewall clubs that has headquarters in the Arlington Hotel.

Secretary Farrell, of the Democratic General Committee, was at his desk at 9 o'clock yesterday morning, and the first thing he did was to begin making arrangements for meetings in every ward of the city. Campaign orators were communicated with, and speakers were urged to volunteer their services because funds are scarce for the Democrats in this campaign. Things progressed so quickly that it was possible to have a meeting in the West Ward last evening for the first time of the week there will be meetings almost nightly in every ward.

TO KEEP THE BALL ROLLING.

"The Bryan meetings," said Mr. Farrell, "have renewed the courage of Democrats. I believe that the best thing we can do now to keep the sentiment for silver growing is to have meetings in localities. Men who know each other will thus be brought together, they will talk among themselves, and they will make converts. Where before it might have been hard to get out hesitating voters, now that excitement has been created by Bryan's visit, it will be easy to get them out. What we want to do is to keep rolling the ball that Bryan started."

The Bryan League will pursue the same tactics. Many meetings have already been held under the direction of the labor organizations, but the future greater efforts will be put forth.

EVERY LABOR MAN IN THE CITY has been aroused by Bryan's speech at the rink," said President McKee, of the Bryan League. "We expected a rousing meeting, but no one imagined there would be such an ovation. It showed that labor men are thinking in this campaign. Apparently all labor men are for Bryan, but there may be some who are hesitating, and last night's meeting will set them to thinking. The right time for campaign meetings is when men are thinking, so we will send out our speakers right away to stump this city as it never was stumped before. Wherever laboring men assemble there our orators will be. They will explain how Bryan's election will benefit the men who use their muscles to earn a livelihood; they will distribute literature, and unless I am much mistaken, labor men will more nearly united at the polls this Fall than ever before."

CAMPBELL ORATORS.

The Bryan and Sewall clubs will be equally active in taking advantage of the opportunity. Senator McNulty and Mirabeau L. Towns yesterday announced that from now on they will attend campaign meetings nightly. The clubs of which they are the leaders will devote particular attention to cart-tail meetings.

"We are anxious," said Secretary De Kremen, "to have a speaker in every ward nightly. The majority have volunteered their services. They are men thoroughly in interest. They have been furnished literature in order to be able to present the issues in the best light. By speaking from cart-tails they will have as auditors many who would not go to an indoor meeting, and in that way will make converts. After the rousing Bryan meeting one who said that the speakers represent a cause that has a god show of winning in this State, and for that reason they will command closer attention."

The organization leaders were particularly pleased with the Bryan meetings. They had been charged with bad faith by some, and the demonstration refuted the charge. It was an indication, too, that Kings County is not such a sure thing for the Republicans as the State leaders believed.

OUTSIDE WESTERN ENTHUSIASM.

Chairman Bernard J. York, of the Campaign Committee, said:

"I expected a big demonstration, but nothing like that given. I said we would outdo the West in cordial greeting to Bryan, and we did. Enthusiasm isn't exclusively of the Occident. Brooklyn has some of it." Senator McNulty said that Bryan's visit was good for hundreds of votes for the Democrats.

"It showed that Brooklyn Democrats are loyal to the party," he said. "It will induce many who were hitherto to come out for the ticket."

John L. Shea said: "Bryan's reception was the most cordial ever given a public man in Brooklyn. It means more than all the straw votes ever taken for the Democrats. The Republicans will have their first big meeting in the rink this evening. Chauncey M. Depew will be the star orator."

The Democratic primaries to elect delegates to the Assembly and Congressional conventions will be next Monday evening. The General Committee will meet on Wednesday night. The Assembly conventions will be on October 2 and the Congressional Conventions on October 3.

ALL BECAUSE OF A FEUD.

Lewis Claims Maxner Stretched a Wire Across the Street to Trip Him.

George Lewis, one of the oldest inhabitants of Astoria, was a complainant in the Long Island City Police Court, yesterday, against his neighbor, John Maxner. The man reside on Grove street, where a bitter feud has been going on for some time between the Lewis and Maxner families.

Lewis told Justice Ingram that on returning to his home on Monday night, his back was struck by a wire which some of his neighbors placed across the street with a view to tripping him. He met Maxner on Tuesday night and accused him of placing the wire on the road. Hot words followed and the argument culminated in a rough-and-tumble fight, in which Mrs. Maxner and several little Maxners took part, when peace was restored by a neighbor.

Justice Ingram said that he was aware of the existence of a feud between the neighbors in that section of Astoria, and that he would lose no time in breaking it up. He found Maxner guilty of assault and suspended sentence pending an investigation into the cause of the trouble.

WOMEN RESISTED ARREST.

Police Then Picked Up the Sofa, Which One Clutched, and Carried Her on It to the Street.

Frederick Horn, of No. 25 Bradford street, Brooklyn, says Mrs. Bridget Tullinan and her sister, Nellie Murray, are the plagues of his hitherto happy life.

Two years ago he bought the $8,000 estate left by Mrs. Tullinan's husband for $2,000 at auction. The woman continued to live in the house, at Fulton street and Miller avenue, against Horn's protest, paying neither rent nor taxes.

The women maintained possession until dispossessed. They vowed that they would get even with their landlord. She had, it is alleged, they annoyed Horn constantly.

Yesterday Horn secured warrants for the women. Policeman Cloonan went to their new home, at Fulton street and Williams avenue, to arrest them. The policeman placed his hand on the door knob he heard a voice within saying: "The moment he attempts to enter the house let us yell murder!"

Cloonan started off. A window was raised and the two women yelled in unison: "Murder! Watch! Police!"

One of the women then left the house hurried toward a policeman who was running up. She told the officer that burglars had tried to enter her house for the purpose of robbery and murder.

Cloonan then arrested her. Three policemen joined him, and the four officers went to work in dislodging away the sofa, which the woman stretched on a sofa. She clutched it and refused to move. The officers seized it and carried it out to the street. She was then taken to the Avenue Court and remanded for trial.

THREE MEN BURIED ALIVE.

They Were Digging Soil for a Roadway at Greenport When the Embankment Gave Way.

Greenport, L. I., Sept. 24.—Two men were badly hurt and one seriously injured in a landslide at Orient, L. I., at 10 o'clock this morning. A gang of about twenty laborers were at work in digging away the soil at Stevenson's Hill and carrying it on the main road for grading purposes. Part of the hill is owned by the town, and, in order not to interfere with the private property, the soil was removed from under a huge boulder. This caused the rock to start from its resting place, and before the workmen could escape they were buried in an avalanche of falling rock and dirt.

The entire force of workmen was summoned to the scene, and began to dig one by one. The men, Egan, a German, in the employ of Clarence Birdseye, of New York, who is a Superintendent at Orient, and two others, were to be rescued. The other two were Captain R. J. Potter and Thomas Rockwell, both of Orient.

They were dug out until fully twenty minutes after the accident, and during the time they had just their heads above the surface of the earth, and were rescued by rescuers. Dr. W. Faucett Smith, of Orient, was summoned, and found Bertelson had sustained a fractured skull.

The noise of the slide caused Mr. Birdseye's team of horses, at work on the road, to run away, and they crashed into the hill, resulting in entire destruction of the latter's wagon and throwing Mr. Tutill several feet.

MAHONEY'S GOOD RECORD.

May Lead the Court Martial to Recommend He Be Only Reprimanded.

The court martial trial of Lieutenant James E. Mahoney, of the Marine Corps, charged with drunkenness, is nearly at an end. At the hearing yesterday the examination of witnesses for the defence was resumed, and Colonel Charles Heywood, the commandant of the Marine Corps, was the first called. He had come from Washington to testify for the accused.

He was examined in regard to Lieutenant Mahoney's general reputation and record as an officer. Colonel Heywood said that the accused had a clean record at department headquarters, and that he had never been against him. A dozen of these reports were read by the witness. They had been made by officers with whom the accused had served since 1891. The reports stated that Lieutenant Mahoney had excellent professional ability, had been attentive to duty and had no charge of drunkenness against his record.

Colonel Heywood testified that the accused had served under his immediate command and had done excellent work. In answer to the question what was Lieutenant Mahoney's general reputation, Colonel Heywood replied that the accused had been an excellent officer. Major Reid and Captain Goodrich, both of the Marine Corps, testified to the good character and clean record of the accused.

After their testimony was ended an adjournment took place. At the adjournment session Captain Littleton W. T. Waller, counsel for the accused, made his argument. He stated that the evidence showed that the accused was a man of good character and clean record. He summed up for the prosecution. To-day the Court Martial will meet to read over the testimony of the day before and to consider the verdict. It is expected that they will reach a decision within a couple of days. Their verdict will be forwarded to Washington for review by the Secretary of the Navy.

In view of Lieutenant Mahoney's good record and of the fact that he had been incapacitated from duty on the general court martial, it is believed that the court will recommend that he be simply reprimanded.

REFERRED ONLY TO HIS DOG.

Grocer Kirchoff Said His Sign Meant No Reception on Mrs. Huber.

John Kirchoff is a grocer doing business at No. 144 Bushwick avenue, Williamsburg. Mrs. Helena Huber, of No. 217 Ten Eyck street, was a complainant in the Police Court, two weeks ago, when they quarrelled over some article she had purchased. Two days later a sign appeared on a fence in the rear of Kirchoff's store, which read: "Look out for Eberhard Huber."

Mrs. Huber became indignant when she saw the sign, believing that it had been placed there for the purpose of insulting her. On Wednesday she went to the Ewen Street Police Court and secured a summons for the grocer's appearance to explain the matter. The summons was returned yesterday, and Kirchoff and Mrs. Huber were in court.

The accused man denied that he had any malice in the matter when he had the sign placed on the fence. I am the owner of a Newcomb and George, named Prince Hubert," said Kirchoff, "and in order to give warning to people not to trespass, placed the sign."

After hearing the explanation Justice Lemon dismissed the summons and Mrs. Huber left the court room still in an indignant state.

MINISTER MAY APOLOGIZE.

Sharkey's Suit Against Dr. Park for Slander $102 Likely to Be Withdrawn.

The slander suit instituted by former Public Works Commissioner Henry W. Sharkey, of Long Island City, against the Rev. Charles Park, pastor of the Astoria Presbyterian Church, is set down for trial on October 4, in the Queens County Court at Long Island City. The suits grows out of certain remarks made by Dr. Park during the Mayor's election, in which he declared that Sharkey was a murderer.

Dr. Park is very popular in Astoria, and it is thought that Sharkey will accept an apology from him, and withdraw the suit before the day set for trial.

Colonel Langford, President.

Colonel Edward C. Langford has been elected president of the Brooklyn & Brighton Beach Railroad Company. He will succeed General James Jourdan. For years Colonel Langford has been secretary. John W. L. Park is chairman, and is in charge of the company's affairs.

General Jourdan decided to give up the presidency some time ago.

SEARCHED FOR HUSBAND MANY YEARS.

Mrs. Gross Says She Was Deserted Over a Quarter of a Century Ago.

Aided by Her Brother She Finally Found Her Alleged Spouse in Brooklyn.

HE DENIED HE EVER KNEW HER.

Joseph Gross Is Now an Old Man and Has a Wife, Children and Grandchildren—The Woman Got a Warrant for His Arrest.

A neatly dressed elderly woman, who claims to be the wife of Joseph Gross, a retired second-hand clothing dealer, yesterday, in the Lee Avenue Police Court, Williamsburg, accused him of abandoning her thirty-two years ago, while living in her native country—Poland. It was not until a week ago, after these years of constant search, that she said she located the man who once promised to love and protect her.

Joseph Gross is sixty-five years old, and lives with his wife and grown children at No. 109 Stockton street. The woman, who claims him as her husband, is Nechi Gross, who arrived in this country a month ago, and is now living with a brother in Yorkers. Gross married his present wife thirty years ago, and she died about a year ago. He was engaged in the second-hand clothing business in Baxter street, from which he accumulated a small fortune, and five years ago retired.

When confronted by the complainant yesterday he denied that he was ever married to her, or had ever seen her before. The woman is a mute, and was accompanied to court by her brother, Bernard Kolinsky, who spoke for her.

According to Kolinsky's story his sister married Gross thirty-five years ago in Poland. Their father was rich and he gave his sister after marriage $1,500, which her husband was to use to start in life. Three years after marriage she was deserted and her husband came to America. From that time his sister, he said, had searched for him. Two years ago Kolinsky said he came to America to try and find him. About a month ago his sister sailed for this country to assist him in the search, still believing, despite the many years, she would yet find her husband. Their efforts were rewarded a week ago, and Mrs. Gross, on Wednesday, went to the Charities Department, in Elm place, Brooklyn, where the story of her desertion was told. An order for Gross's arrest was given the woman, and while she was obtaining the warrant the Lee Avenue Police Court yesterday morning, Gross appeared in court. He was accompanied by his lawyer, and told the magistrate that he had been informed that his wife was to be arrested, and that he was ready to surrender himself. Gross waited until the warrant was sworn to, and then pleaded not guilty to the charge.

Justice Goetting paroled him for examination. Gross is said to have several grandchildren.

ROW AT WOODS'S TRIAL.

Lawyer Grant Intimated that the Police Commissioners Were Acting Under Gleason's Orders.

The trial of Police Captain Anthony S. Woods, of Long Island City, which began several months ago, ended yesterday morning in a row between Police Commissioner Fitzgibbon and Lawyer Louis J. Grant, counsel for the accused officer. The Captain, who is a veteran of the late war, is accused of violating a book of rules, which he swore, were never adopted by the Police Board.

After the Captain testified that he was at one time Commissary Quartermaster and Commandant at Point Lookout, Md., Lawyer Grant moved to dismiss the case on the ground that the evidence showed he was a fit and proper officer. It did not amount to anything at all.

"It is my duty," said Grant, "to say, and say publicly, that rumors have gone out, and the report has been widely circulated, that there are certain members of the Board who have made up their minds not to dismiss these charges under any circumstances. I cannot believe that the members of this Board, after spending so much time in the trial of this case, should prostitute their names to such a purpose. I only want to say that if it is possible for men to act in such a manner, you have to look to your consciences and your own honor. My order has gone forth from Mayor Gleason."

"I object to this kind of talk," shouted Commissioner Fitzgibbon, jumping up. "He is casting reflections on this Board." The lawyer then moved to dismiss the case on the ground that the evidence showed he was a fit and proper officer. It did not amount to anything at all.

"I object to this kind of talk," shouted Commissioner Fitzgibbon, jumping up. "He is casting reflections on this Board." The lawyer then moved to dismiss the case on the ground that the evidence showed he was a fit and proper officer. It did not amount to anything at all.

"I object to this kind of talk," shouted Commissioner Fitzgibbon, jumping up. "He is casting reflections on this Board." The lawyer then moved to dismiss the case on the ground that the evidence showed he was a fit and proper officer. It did not amount to anything at all.

"I object to this kind of talk," shouted Commissioner Fitzgibbon, jumping up. "He is casting reflections on this Board." The lawyer then moved to dismiss the case on the ground that the evidence showed he was a fit and proper officer. It did not amount to anything at all.

"I object to this kind of talk," shouted Commissioner Fitzgibbon, jumping up. "He is casting reflections on this Board." The lawyer then moved to dismiss the case on the ground that the evidence showed he was a fit and proper officer. It did not amount to anything at all.

"I object to this kind of talk," shouted Commissioner Fitzgibbon, jumping up. "He is casting reflections on this Board." The lawyer then moved to dismiss the case on the ground that the evidence showed he was a fit and proper officer. It did not amount to anything at all.

"I object to this kind of talk," shouted Commissioner Fitzgibbon, jumping up. "He is casting reflections on this Board." The lawyer then moved to dismiss the case on the ground that the evidence showed he was a fit and proper officer. It did not amount to anything at all.

"I object to this kind of talk," shouted Commissioner Fitzgibbon, jumping up. "He is casting reflections on this Board." The lawyer then moved to dismiss the case on the ground that the evidence showed he was a fit and proper officer. It did not amount to anything at all.

"I object to this kind of talk," shouted Commissioner Fitzgibbon, jumping up. "He is casting reflections on this Board." The lawyer then moved to dismiss the case on the ground that the evidence showed he was a fit and proper officer. It did not amount to anything at all.

"I object to this kind of talk," shouted Commissioner Fitzgibbon, jumping up. "He is casting reflections on this Board." The lawyer then moved to dismiss the case on the ground that the evidence showed he was a fit and proper officer. It did not amount to anything at all.

"I object to this kind of talk," shouted Commissioner Fitzgibbon, jumping up. "He is casting reflections on this Board." The lawyer then moved to dismiss the case on the ground that the evidence showed he was a fit and proper officer. It did not amount to anything at all.

"I object to this kind of talk," shouted Commissioner Fitzgibbon, jumping up. "He is casting reflections on this Board." The lawyer then moved to dismiss the case on the ground that the evidence showed he was a fit and proper officer. It did not amount to anything at all.

"I object to this kind of talk," shouted Commissioner Fitzgibbon, jumping up. "He is casting reflections on this Board." The lawyer then moved to dismiss the case on the ground that the evidence showed he was a fit and proper officer. It did not amount to anything at all.

"I object to this kind of talk," shouted Commissioner Fitzgibbon, jumping up. "He is casting reflections on this Board." The lawyer then moved to dismiss the case on the ground that the evidence showed he was a fit and proper officer. It did not amount to anything at all.

"I object to this kind of talk," shouted Commissioner Fitzgibbon, jumping up. "He is casting reflections on this Board." The lawyer then moved to dismiss the case on the ground that the evidence showed he was a fit and proper officer. It did not amount to anything at all.

"I object to this kind of talk," shouted Commissioner Fitzgibbon, jumping up. "He is casting reflections on this Board." The lawyer then moved to dismiss the case on the ground that the evidence showed he was a fit and proper officer. It did not amount to anything at all.

"I object to this kind of talk," shouted Commissioner Fitzgibbon, jumping up. "He is casting reflections on this Board." The lawyer then moved to dismiss the case on the ground that the evidence showed he was a fit and proper officer. It did not amount to anything at all.

"I object to this kind of talk," shouted Commissioner Fitzgibbon, jumping up. "He is casting reflections on this Board." The lawyer then moved to dismiss the case on the ground that the evidence showed he was a fit and proper officer. It did not amount to anything at all.

"I object to this kind of talk," shouted Commissioner Fitzgibbon, jumping up. "He is casting reflections on this Board." The lawyer then moved to dismiss the case on the ground that the evidence showed he was a fit and proper officer. It did not amount to anything at all.

"I object to this kind of talk," shouted Commissioner Fitzgibbon, jumping up. "He is casting reflections on this Board." The lawyer then moved to dismiss the case on the ground that the evidence showed he was a fit and proper officer. It did not amount to anything at all.

STANGE STORY OF MRS. GEORGE FREUND.

Her First Husband Disappeared Three Days After Their Wedding.

Body Found in the River, Supposed to Be His, Buried in Potter's Field.

MARRIED AGAIN TWO YEARS LATER.

This Was Twenty-six Years Ago, and Now Her Present Husband, Freund, Claims That His Wife Was Not a Widow When He Wedded Her.

A strange story of a marriage, desertion and suicide was brought to light in the Gates Avenue Court, Brooklyn, yesterday by the institution of a criminal action for non-support, in which Mrs. Matilda Freund was the complainant.

Mrs. Freund is the wife of George E. Freund, a well-known tavern keeper at No. 24 Grand street, who has borne his name and shared his fortune for over twenty-five years.

Early in April, 1868, Mrs. Freund married Frederick Dreyer, a young German mechanic, who had been a most devoted admirer. The couple at once went to housekeeping.

Three days after the marriage Dreyer dressed himself in his wedding clothes and started out for a walk. "I'll be back in an hour," he said to his wife.

Mrs. Dreyer looked out of the window and watched him until he disappeared from view. She never saw him again. Nine days later she was informed that her husband had been found in the East River, and that he had been buried in Potter's Field.

The widow and her brother, Herman Wagner, declared that her husband was the body which Dreyer was the day of his marriage.

An outburst of grief the bride destroyed her own wedding gown and then drowned a widow's wail.

Two years later Mrs. Dreyer became the wife of Freund, who then, as now, was in business in Greenpoint. For twenty-six years they lived happily. Recently rumor reached Freund to the effect that his wife was not a widow when he married him.

He was told that his wife was living in Germany, and that the story of his suicide was a myth.

Freund testified in his own behalf. He said that he had been informed that his wife was to be arrested, and that he was ready to surrender himself. Gross waited until the warrant was sworn to, and then pleaded not guilty to the charge.

Justice Goetting paroled him for examination. Gross is said to have several grandchildren.

"I object to this kind of talk," shouted Commissioner Fitzgibbon, jumping up. "He is casting reflections on this Board." The lawyer then moved to dismiss the case on the ground that the evidence showed he was a fit and proper officer. It did not amount to anything at all.

"I object to this kind of talk," shouted Commissioner Fitzgibbon, jumping up. "He is casting reflections on this Board." The lawyer then moved to dismiss the case on the ground that the evidence showed he was a fit and proper officer. It did not amount to anything at all.

"I object to this kind of talk," shouted Commissioner Fitzgibbon, jumping up. "He is casting reflections on this Board." The lawyer then moved to dismiss the case on the ground that the evidence showed he was a fit and proper officer. It did not amount to anything at all.

"I object to this kind of talk," shouted Commissioner Fitzgibbon, jumping up. "He is casting reflections on this Board." The lawyer then moved to dismiss the case on the ground that the evidence showed he was a fit and proper officer. It did not amount to anything at all.

"I object to this kind of talk," shouted Commissioner Fitzgibbon, jumping up. "He is casting reflections on this Board." The lawyer then moved to dismiss the case on the ground that the evidence showed he was a fit and proper officer. It did not amount to anything at all.

"I object to this kind of talk," shouted Commissioner Fitzgibbon, jumping up. "He is casting reflections on this Board." The lawyer then moved to dismiss the case on the ground that the evidence showed he was a fit and proper officer. It did not amount to anything at all.

"I object to this kind of talk," shouted Commissioner Fitzgibbon, jumping up. "He is casting reflections on this Board." The lawyer then moved to dismiss the case on the ground that the evidence showed he was a fit and proper officer. It did not amount to anything at all.

"I object to this kind of talk," shouted Commissioner Fitzgibbon, jumping up. "He is casting reflections on this Board." The lawyer then moved to dismiss the case on the ground that the evidence showed he was a fit and proper officer. It did not amount to anything at all.

"I object to this kind of talk," shouted Commissioner Fitzgibbon, jumping up. "He is casting reflections on this Board." The lawyer then moved to dismiss the case on the ground that the evidence showed he was a fit and proper officer. It did not amount to anything at all.

"I object to this kind of talk," shouted Commissioner Fitzgibbon, jumping up. "He is casting reflections on this Board." The lawyer then moved to dismiss the case on the ground that the evidence showed he was a fit and proper officer. It did not amount to anything at all.

"I object to this kind of talk," shouted Commissioner Fitzgibbon, jumping up. "He is casting reflections on this Board." The lawyer then moved to dismiss the case on the ground that the evidence showed he was a fit and proper officer. It did not amount to anything at all.

"I object to this kind of talk," shouted Commissioner Fitzgibbon, jumping up. "He is casting reflections on this Board." The lawyer then moved to dismiss the case on the ground that the evidence showed he was a fit and proper officer. It did not amount to anything at all.

"I object to this kind of talk," shouted Commissioner Fitzgibbon, jumping up. "He is casting reflections on this Board." The lawyer then moved to dismiss the case on the ground that the evidence showed he was a fit and proper officer. It did not amount to anything at all.

"I object to this kind of talk," shouted Commissioner Fitzgibbon, jumping up. "He is casting reflections on this Board." The lawyer then moved to dismiss the case on the ground that the evidence showed he was a fit and proper officer. It did not amount to anything at all.

"I object to this kind of talk," shouted Commissioner Fitzgibbon, jumping up. "He is casting reflections on this Board." The lawyer then moved to dismiss the case on the ground that the evidence showed he was a fit and proper officer. It did not amount to anything at all.

"I object to this kind of talk," shouted Commissioner Fitzgibbon, jumping up. "He is casting reflections on this Board." The lawyer then moved to dismiss the case on the ground that the evidence showed he was a fit and proper officer. It did not amount to anything at all.

"I object to this kind of talk," shouted Commissioner Fitzgibbon, jumping up. "He is casting reflections on this Board." The lawyer then moved to dismiss the case on the ground that the evidence showed he was a fit and proper officer. It did not amount to anything at all.

"I object to this kind of talk," shouted Commissioner Fitzgibbon, jumping up. "He is casting reflections on this Board." The lawyer then moved to dismiss the case on the ground that the evidence showed he was a fit and proper officer. It did not amount to anything at all.

"I object to this kind of talk," shouted Commissioner Fitzgibbon, jumping up. "He is casting reflections on this Board." The lawyer then moved to dismiss the case on the ground that the evidence showed he was a fit and proper officer. It did not amount to anything at all.

"I object to this kind of talk," shouted Commissioner Fitzgibbon, jumping up. "He is casting reflections on this Board." The lawyer then moved to dismiss the case on the ground that the evidence showed he was a fit and proper officer. It did not amount to anything at all.

CHASE FOR AN ESCAPED LUNATIC.

When Attendants Were Not Watching Quinn Got Out of the Asylum.

Ran Through Flatbush Streets and Frightened the School Children.

MOUNTED POLICEMAN IN PURSUIT.

When Overtaken Quinn Was Quietly Strolling Back to the Institution—Submitted to Capture and Was Placed Under Restraint.

There was an exciting chase for an escaped lunatic on Wednesday afternoon in Flatbush. The authorities of the Long Island State Hospital, where the patient had been confined, denied that the lunatic had escaped and did what they could to suppress the story, but the facts leaked out.

The twenty-third Precinct had their attention called to the matter. Roundsman Knox was informed of the occurrence by a civilian who lives in the neighborhood of the hospital.

Harry Quinn, thirty-five years old, and afflicted with chronic mania, has been a patient at the institution for three years. He is considered dangerous at times. Frequent New York to be placed under restraint, but more often he has been so quiet that he could be given the freedom of the grounds were it not that the authorities appreciated that he could not be relied upon.

As a rule three attendants stand guard over him. On Wednesday afternoon Quinn was in one of his most peaceful moods. He appeared quiet in every way. He had been quiet for three days, and he was now being watched by three attendants.

He was seen by a policeman, who was on duty at the time. The policeman was on duty at the time. The policeman was on duty at the time.

He was seen by a policeman, who was on duty at the time. The policeman was on duty at the time. The policeman was on duty at the time.

He was seen by a policeman, who was on duty at the time. The policeman was on duty at the time. The policeman was on duty at the time.

He was seen by a policeman, who was on duty at the time. The policeman was on duty at the time. The policeman was on duty at the time.

He was seen by a policeman, who was on duty at the time. The policeman was on duty at the time. The policeman was on duty at the time.

He was seen by a policeman, who was on duty at the time. The policeman was on duty at the time. The policeman was on duty at the time.

He was seen by a policeman, who was on duty at the time. The policeman was on duty at the time. The policeman was on duty at the time.

He was seen by a policeman, who was on duty at the time. The policeman was on duty at the time. The policeman was on duty at the time.

He was seen by a policeman, who was on duty at the time. The policeman was on duty at the time. The policeman was on duty at the time.

He was seen by a policeman, who was on duty at the time. The policeman was on duty at the time. The policeman was on duty at the time.

He was seen by a policeman, who was on duty at the time. The policeman was on duty at the time. The policeman was on duty at the time.

He was seen by a policeman, who was on duty at the time. The policeman was on duty at the time. The policeman was on duty at the time.

&lt;